Merry Christmas

If Dahlias Bloomed in December

If Dahlias bloomed in December they'd rival the prettiest of poinsettias with all their vibrant colors in every shape and size.

They'd adorn wreaths, trees, holiday tables and mantels.

They'd be right there amongst the paper whites, Christmas cactuses and amaryllis stealing the show.

I envision them in my mind's eye on my Christmas tree right with the lights, all the snowman, croqueted snowflakes and homemade ornaments the kids made in kindergarten.

I know, I know we are suppose enjoy the season
Which I do immensely

All dreaming and fun aside I have to say, WHEW...I'm so glad dahlias don't bloom in December as I couldn't grow them here in Alaska without a heated greenhouse. Besides winter is the time for rest and reflection and planning the New Year with hopefully a vacation thrown in there before planting starts again in the spring.

Over the rest of the winter, there will be wedding flower webpages, making more dahlia flower lapel pins and a little surprise or two for all our flower fans and friends.

And of course planning and planning for Flower Season 2017.

Update:

We don't publish the next newsletter magazine until March as we take January and February off (and yes a vacay is planned). Although we do have the Bridal Specular in January and I'll be speaking at the Matsu Women in Business Lip Gloss and Leadership Business Summit in Feb.

BTW: March is also when we start our dahlia tubers.

From All Dahlia'd Flower Farm we wish everyone a Merry Christmas and a Healthy, Happy New Year.

Please keep us in mind for your summer flower needs.

We will be keeping you posted over on the blog.

Sunflowers the happy stars of summer...

Hello my flower friend,

Its almost the end of the year!

We've had a fantastic one here at All Dahlia'd Up.

We will have 2600 sq. in flower production in 2017. Almost double in size ☺

See you in March!
