Fall Blessings

Happy Sad....

Later today I'll be out taking advantage of our late fall sunshine and nice weather to finish up farm clean up around here. All the tubers are out of the ground, dived and stored. The pots are clean and ready for spring planting. Although I'm happy that soon I'll get some much needed physical rest, I'm sad to have no dahlias in bloom and other flowers to tend to.

What gets me through is I also LOVE to plan and improve every year. This year I'm pumping up the plans and fine tuning by my husband and I attending the Cut Flower Growers Conference down in Grand Rapids Michigan. The conference is all about flower farming with various workshops and talks from some of the top flower farmers in the US. I'm totally stoked!

For those who didn't get a chance to partake in any of our flower farm tours and workshops this year the good news is we've added 4 in 2017. We will be kicking off our winter blog series very soon with the dates and descriptions. This means they won't be the same oh, same oh. Even if you've attended before there will be something new at every tour.

Our last Monday Market this year we were finally able to bring out our Misty Valley Dahlia Delight Honey by Sleeping Lady Farms who have a few hives near our dahlias. The honey is like spun silk; it has a lightly golden hue and lovely not heavy sweet taste. We are offering it at $16.00 for 11oz. Give us a call if you like to purchase some.

We kicked off October with our first wedding show of the season to promote our wedding flowers and venue. Was a great turnout and do have plans on attending more over the winter.

One more thing before I go, Let's talk about our 8 Weeks of Summer flower subscription service. We've decided to offer a special, now through November 15th. $100.00 down to reserve your slot for this next season at first come first serve basis.

Check out our ad further in this newsletter.

Get out your sweaters and scarves and be sure to buy yourself a pumpkin!

Hello my name is Misty VanderWeele,

I LOVE that you are here!

I've grown Dahlias for nearly 20 years and founded All Dahlia'd Up the summer of 2014. October has been mild but has marked the end of our growing season and the beginning of fall cleanup. Enjoy!

Have you heard how we began? Check it out on our Facebook page.
