Hot & Happy...on the Brink of Overwhelm

The 2019 flower season started with coming home from vacation in March with having to move my mother into an Assisted Living home caused by the progression of emphysema and the plan and enough seeds to start to increase our flower production from a quarter acre to over a half. Which included 8600 tulips in the ground waiting for spring and all three of the tours almost sold out.

Already on the brink of overwhelm I knuckled down, stuck to my plan and somehow through Mom's doctor bills, visits and the over hot summer the flower farm was a wonderful success. But not without a ton of help from family, employees and a self promise to listen to my body and heart. I even fit in a trip to Swan Island Dahlias at the end of August. Something of which has been on my bucket list for some time.

I'm so proud of my myself I can't help but reminisce.

I hope you come with me as I extend an invitation for you to come take a walk through the flower season of 2019 with me.

Up first is our first year tulips. The colors still blow me away.

My Flower Stand

The flower stand is something I often dreamed about.

A place on farm where customers or someone just out for a drive could stop in for a flower fix.

This little building is a great start. It's given All Dahliad Up a simple place to call home.

I look forward to be open angina in 2020. With some changes and additions. We can't wait to share.

Alaska Flower Farm Tours

July

For our first sold-out tour to kick off our season we had a chocolate and BYOWine night. We will be doing this one again. It's a simpler event with a smaller price point as the farm is just gearing up. What fun, chocolate, wine and flower halos. A total win.

August Field to Vase, Farm to Table Tour

August is when the majority of our fields are in bloom. Sweetpeas are in all their glory, The dahlias are coming on and the various other fun flowers we grow as well.

Our second sold-out tour experience came with our every popular Alaska Grown catered meal, make your own bouquet and of course our guided tour through our farm.

2020 Tour Dates
will be announced soon.
Tickets go on sale in January.

September, Field to Vase, Farm to Table Tour

September is similar to the August tour except there is way more dahlias as they are in full bloom.

All our tour experiences also come with a professional photographer. This season we had for the first tour Jenna D Photography and for the last two Mommy's Little Monsters. We highly recommend both.

Our 1st On-Farm Pickup Flower CSA Subscription

Our CSA Program ~
1 farmers choice arrangement a week for 8 weeks to be picked up at our Flower Stand here on the farm.

By the time you are reading this we only have 4 spots left for season 2020. We adore our CSA customers. They help us keep what we do sustainable.

With pre-payment you get a killer deal and in turn we are assured we have the necessary funds to purchase all farm operation expenses like seeds and potting soil.

Another successful market Season. Saturday after Saturday we faced a sold booth, happily packing up and taking empty tables back to the farm.

Hope you enjoyed the flower fun and magic of 2019.

We've taken 100's of photos all season and will be sharing them on Facebook all winter.

Come follow us if haven't already.
